Officer Conflict Resolution in the Summer

Conflict may arise among officers during the summer, and it may be difficult to resolve issues without the club advisors.

Set up summer meetings with the officers where everyone can discuss the summer plans and resolve any conflicts.

Hold the meeting somewhere different such as a cafe or park to change up the environment.

Officers should share their opinions respectfully, as everyone wants what is best for the club.

DON'T BRING CONFLICT INTO THE SCHOOL YEAR!

Participation Conflict Resolution in the Summer

There may be a decrease in member participation during the summer because school is out.

Find a way to contact members about upcoming volunteer opportunities using social media, Google Classroom, Remind, or any other effective method of communication.

Create a newsletter to give members before summer break about the upcoming summer volunteer events so they are aware of opportunities ahead of time.

It is important to resolve conflict as soon as possible to eliminate potential problems that may stem from the conflict.

Remember to always be kind and respectful when resolving a conflict, everyone has differing opinions that should be considered.

Most importantly, don't let conflict ruin your summer of volunteering. Work together as a club, better your communities, and have fun!
